It has been an exciting year for contemporary art, with a young generation of artists pushing the boundaries both in terms of materials and subject matters. But with so much going on it's easy to miss out.

In an effort to capture the moment, we at artnet News have put together a directory of the most exciting artists showing, living, and working in Europe at the moment.

Huanca works with painting installations and performance. Her use of a light and bright palette, often incorporating the physical nude human body, creates unique tensions in her work.

The New York based artist was awarded the Fulbright Scholarship in 2012, and exhibited at MoMA PS1, among others, but it's her shows in Europe, most recently "MUSCLE MEMORY" at Peres Projects in Berlin, that drew due attention to her versatile work.
