Mark Flood's Google Murder-Suicide Opens in New York

A look at the artist and Supreme collaborator's solo show

Written by AMUSE TEAM

Texas-based artist and art world disruptor Mark Flood is back with another (bound to be hyped) solo show in GOOGLE MURDER-SUICIDE.

Flood's previous work includes his now-iconic show Mark Flood Resents at Chelsea's Zach Feuer gallery, where he created an entirely artist-run gallery, showroom, exhibition space and crash pad where the art was on display but not for sale. Mattresses were on the floor and it soon became the go-to hangout spot for NY's young contemporary artists including Chloe Wise and Carly Mark (and was live streamed 24/7 using four webcams).

Then there are the shows he's curated, including Irrational Women (which featured works by Ana Villagomez, Susie Rosmarin and Sharon Engelstein) and Emotionally Unavailable Men (which featured works by Paul Kremer and Chris Bexar).

GOOGLE MURDER-SUICIDE is a continuation of the artist's fascination with meme culture and gives a nod to Flood's anarchistic, punk-imbued works - kind of like if '77 punk met 4chan.

GOOGLE MURDER-SUICIDE is on until July 28 at Maccarone Gallery, NYC
